

Lilies of the Field

Posted on Jul 28, Posted by Lois Lowry Category Uncategorized

I think that's an old movie title. Sidney Poitier and a bunch of cheery nuns, maybe?

IN my case, it's just a lot of flowers in my garden (see photos), and also:

a shameless plug (I get no commission) for Deerwood Gardens in North Waterford, Maine, where Beverly Hendricks raises thousands of daylilies of all varieties. I took my visiting thirteen-year-olds there yesterday (they thinking, Ho hum, gotta humor the grandma) ...then they were just as dazzled as everyone is on seeing the array of colors this time of year. I had them each pick out two...(and now I forget the names they chose, except for "Blueberry Candy" and "Aquarelle.") Bev went out and dug up their choices and so yesterday my visitors went on to their next stop (and how I'll miss their giggling!) with daylilies tucked in the back of the rental car.

And what's a great way to amuse 13-year-olds iif you have a good camera and know how to use Photoshop?

Here are the fake book jackets I made for them:

Tags: Untagged